Subject: Silks strip out revised invoice and explanation.

■

■Andy,

As you will know Lizzy has recommended the payment net of Vat for Silks invoice. This was received overnight.

This was Lizzy's reference from her recent email that you forwarded on to me.

Good Afternoon Andy,

I hope you are well and apologies my email was later than advised, I was unexpectedly delayed due to incoming phone calls.

I have noted below a response to the queries raised:

* I have submitted my report this evening to management for sign off. The report recommends payment for the non VAT amount of SilkServices quote for strip out works at £5,820.00 and for

It was then agreed with Silks that they would deduct £600 as this is what Everhot is charging to remove the Everhot.

This was referenced by Lizzy in the same email:-

Regarding removal of the cooker, the quote from SilkServices allows 8 hours for a heating engineer to remove and set aside the cooker. I am happy for a specialist to remove the ever-hot cooker at £600.00 plus VAT, which includes removals to and from storage, plus the running cost of £50.00 per week for storage, however we will require confirmation of SilkServices cost for the 8 hours allowance for a heating engineer to remove the cooker, so we may deduct this from the above costs.

We therefore sent Silks this morning £5,220 which is the amount they are owed net of VAT.

We have kept the remaining £600 to pay Everhot.

I am attaching the revised invoice from Silk which includes the £600 deduction net of VAT.

We will receive a credit note from Silks for the original invoices (prior to the adjustment). Mark please can you forward to Andy cc'd me.

However, Silks are still owed the VAT amount from this revised invoice of £1,044.

We will also forward you the Everhot invoice as soon as it is received.

I am copying in Mark Crockford from Silks with the request that he confirms this email meets with his understanding.

I would be grateful if you could forward the attached email together with this invoice as the basis for making the additional payment of £1,044 covering the VAT.

I am sorry for the complexity but so wanted to detail it to avoid any misunderstanding.

Thanks Andy.
