Good evening Nicholas

As previously discussed Sarah & I did query this with Lloyds last week and they have confirmed BBB is not included on your policy.

Whilst Sainsburys have referenced within their publicity, I can also see that they have caveated this by saying “several of whom” (importantly not all nor clarified which does) and then also to “check your policy schedule to confirm if this is included”. This is normally added as an endorsement to the schedule and this is why Sainsbury’s are unable to confirm definitively within publicity, having just reviewed the schedule you shared previously, I can not find any endorsements added to confirm that BBB is included which aligns to Lloyds confirmation. We’ll check again though with Lloyds for you.

Thank you for the documents and quotes last week, these were useful for me and will assist conversations with Lloyds, we hope to update further in the week as we continue to push Lloyds for their position on the building re-instatement.

Kind regards

Simon

Subject: Sainsbury's actively publicise that their underwriters

Hi Simon,

I mentioned to Adam Clutterbuck this morning whilst confirming that I had paid his invoice that we are not eligible for the BBB scheme. We thought the reason was that our policy was packaged through Sainsbury's Home insurance.

He kindly came back to me and said that would be odd as the BBB inclusion was referenced in their publicity.

Sainsbury's Bank offers home insurance through a panel of major UK insurers, several of whom participate in the Build Back Better (BBB) scheme led by Flood Re. This scheme allows homeowners who suffer an eligible flood claim to receive up to £10,000 for flood resilience measures (such as flood doors or raised electrical sockets) in addition to the standard repair costs.

Participation in the Scheme

While Sainsbury's Bank is a provider, the BBB benefits are determined by the specific insurer underwriting your policy. As of 2026, Sainsbury's Bank has transitioned to a model where all new and renewal policies are offered through Allianz UK (LV=) starting November 2025.

Sainsbury's existing and former panel includes several insurers officially signed up for Build Back Better:

- Allianz UK (LV=) – Currently the primary partner for new and renewal policies.
- Aviva
- Ageas
- AXA Insurance
- Lloyds Bank General Insurance
- RSA (Royal and Sun Alliance)

Key Points for Sainsbury's Customers

- Transition to Allianz: If you are an existing customer, your policy will likely move to LV= (an Allianz brand) upon your 2026 renewal date.
- Policy Verification: To confirm if your specific policy includes BBB cover, you should check your Policy Schedule or the Home Insurance Policy Booklet for mention of "Flood Re" or "Build Back Better".
- Eligibility: The BBB funding is typically only available for claims caused specifically by flooding, not for other types of damage like burst pipes or storms.

I have also been on to the Flood Re eligibility checker and confirmed that our property qualifies for the Flood Re.

Certainly, this looks very clear that our presumption that we were covered is predicated on what would be reasonable for a policyholder to believe. It makes me wonder how many other policyholders should benefit from this and have been given the brush off!

Sometimes insurers fail to cede the risk to the Flood Re to save the premium. There has been so much publicity about the benefits of BBB. Sainsbury's and Lloyds Bank clearly benefited by associating themselves with the scheme. If they fail to cede the risk to the Flood Re then I rather take the view that it is their lookout and not ours. Do you agree?

I will leave it to you as to whether you wish to raise this point with insurers at this time? You are handling the negotiation and you may feel now is not the time to raise it in which case and if so that is fine with me. We can obviously submit the point down the track but if you felt it was helpful to raise it now please do!

Best regards,

Nicholas
