Hi Andy,

Bio Response called Mr Scarr near the beginning of the month and he was to call back so that they can arrange to remove the 1st floor contents and discuss items.

They have not heard back from him. Please ask him to make contact as they would like to fit what is needed in as soon as possible.

I saw the quote and will wait for Kevin to review.

I am off the 24th and back in the following Monday.

I hope you have a peaceful holiday break.

Kind regards,

Garrett Young Cert CILA Cert CII

Subject: Waterproofing Quotes from Maclennans and Silks -

Dear Andy,

I’m writing to clarify the necessity and function of the sump pump systems and battery backup specified within the proposed waterproofing scheme for 1 Riverside Cottages, and to confirm their inclusion within the waterproofing design as reflected in the MacLennan quotation, with associated builder’s works addressed in the Silks quotation.

Due to the property’s construction — including earth-retaining walls, raised external ground levels, and underlying clay subsoil — the structure is subject to persistent hydrostatic pressure and perched groundwater. This creates a foreseeable risk of water ingress at slab joints and wall–floor interfaces, particularly following rainfall or infrastructure failure, as occurred during the February 2025 flooding event.

The MacLennan proposal specifies:

An internal Hydrosump-Pro to manage water collected behind the internal cavity drain membrane (Type C protection);

An external Hydrosump-Pro to relieve water build-up around the structure, particularly at the rear terrace threshold.

Because flood events often coincide with power failure — notably in this case due to Southern Water’s pumping station malfunction — the design also includes battery backup systems (Victron inverter + dual battery banks). These ensure continued pump operation during mains outages.

This configuration complies with BS 8102:2022, which requires drained systems to remain functional under foreseeable conditions, including power loss (Clause 9.2.3). Duty and backup pumps, high-level alarms, and battery-supported operation are all standard requirements for resilient protection in such environments.

The Silks quotation has been prepared following detailed discussions with MacLennan and reflects the builder-side works required to support delivery of the waterproofing system as specified.

Please find attached both the MacLennan and Silks quotations for reference.

To summarise: the sump pumps and battery backup are not discretionary. They are essential elements of a BS-compliant waterproofing strategy, addressing known risks at this property. Their inclusion is necessary to ensure the system performs as designed under both normal and adverse conditions.

Kind regards,

Nicholas

Nicholas Scarr
