Hi Andy,

I've spoken to Kevin about the quotes that were submitted.

Regarding the MacLennan quote.

Line 2 refers to a hydro drain channel around the floor joint is this the same thing as the Aco drain that is being installed by Silk Services? There is also mention of installation in the corners.

As to the pumps, we find the costs quite high, and it would also appear that there are also back up pumps so there is a case of betterment where we have additional pumps added.

We would look to agree to an internal pump installation but not multiple pumps.

As to the pump control units, we are not sure what they do as a sump pump would operate when the water level rises and again would seem to be betterment. The same would apply to the dialer unit, line #11 which appears to be a warning system.

Lines 12 and 13 note battery backup units and it is felt that if there is a loss of power due to a flooding event, then the building is probably beyond the capacity of what the pumping system can undertake as the waters will be very deep with nothing to pump into.

As to the Silk quote for the installation of the drainage and cementious coating. They note installation of surface drainage at the rear elevation. This would appear to be an external drain and again would appear to be betterment to the system.

We also question that if there is flood water to the area outside the home, where is the water being pumped as the sewage drainage system will be underwater.

In the Silk quote for the reinstatement, they mentioned an Aco drain to be installed at the front entrance to a sump pump, we would consider this betterment.

They also mention 1st and 2nd fix electrics and plumbing. Please confirm that this includes all the connections for the drains and pumps internally as we may have to look to amend this cost considering the number of pumps that we would not be looking to cover.

We note the quote for the worktops for a quartz surface. In reviewing the photos of the kitchen there was only a small section of quartz top next to the stove with the remainder of a butcher block design. We would need to see something more similar in pricing.

Please let me know if there are any other costs that have not been considered as MacLennan mentions many items to be undertaken by others.

If you could please come back to me regarding these, I will then forward on my comments to insurers.

Kind regards,

Garrett Young Cert CILA Cert CII
