Dear Nicholas

I am so sorry to hear that 12 months on, this is still ongoing for you all.

I cannot even begin to imagine the frustration, stress, anger and upset this has caused you all.

If it is ok with you, I will look to check in over the next 4-6 weeks to see how things are going with this all. If things do get settled before then, though, please do get in contact and between us, we can certainly look into how you wish to proceed forward.

Please know that I am here to help, and I would certainly be happy to help in whatever way I can once you get a final answer from the insurer.

Once again, I am sorry to hear that this is still causing problems for you, but please do pass on my best to your family, and I will look forward to speaking with you again soon.

With best wishes

Yours sincerely

Dr Danny Chambers MP

Dear Danny,
Thank you for your email — it was very good to hear from you.
I wanted to send a brief holding note regarding the situation at Riverside Cottages. It is now nearly twelve months since Southern Water flooded the house with sewage. Notwithstanding all of our efforts, we still do not have an agreed position with the insurers, who, frankly, have proved extremely difficult to deal with.

While work has finally started on reinstating the house, there remain significant gaps in the safety requirements. As you know from our meeting, this claim arises from a Category 3 sewage contamination incident. Our central concern remains that Louisa is physically and mentally highly vulnerable.
As you may recall, we provided medical evidence from Dr Vanya Gant, Clinical Director in Microbiology and Infectious Diseases at UCLH. His advice was unequivocal: Louisa is at far greater risk of serious infection than a healthy adult. Crucially, Dr Gant stated that it is "essentially impossible" to restore contaminated fabrics to a safe standard, and that cleaning must be to "hospital standards".
While the insurers have finally, many months later, agreed to replace a reasonable proportion of contaminated items, they continue to insist that we retain others which we believe remain unsafe. This is despite the clear medical evidence provided, and despite the serious consequences for Louisa should she be exposed to contamination, which we believe has been seriously mismanaged by the insurers throughout this claim.
Regrettably, the combination of this stance and the prolonged delay has significantly compounded the complexity and scope of the loss. I remain concerned that, had we not robustly challenged aspects of the approach taken, Louisa's health could have been placed at serious risk.
Given your background in infectious disease control, you are one of the few MPs who will fully appreciate the clinical and public health dimensions of this failure. More broadly, I am increasingly uneasy that our experience may not be isolated, and that other vulnerable policyholders may be facing similar risks in complex contamination cases.
Once the insurer's position is finalised, I would be very grateful to take you up on your kind offer of assistance to discuss how best to escalate matters, particularly regarding both the insurer and Southern Water.
With best wishes,

Nicholas
